

Nos. 19-251 & 19-255

In The
Supreme Court of the United States

AMERICANS FOR PROSPERITY FOUNDATION,
Petitioner,

v.

XAVIER BECERRA, in his official capacity
as the Attorney General of California,
Respondent.

THOMAS MORE LAW CENTER,
Petitioner,

v.

XAVIER BECERRA, in his official capacity
as the Attorney General of California,
Respondent.

On Petitions For Writs Of Certiorari
To The United States Court Of Appeals For The Ninth Circuit

BRIEF OF THE PHILANTHROPY ROUNDTABLE, INDEPENDENT WOMEN'S FORUM, AND PEOPLE
UNITED FOR PRIVACY FOUNDATION AS *AMICI
CURIAE* IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONERS

SAMUEL S. SADEGHI
MORGAN, LEWIS &
BOCKIUS LLP
600 Anton Boulevard,
Suite 1800
Costa Mesa, CA 92626
(714) 830-0600

ALEXANDER L. REID
Counsel of Record
JAMES D. NELSON
MORGAN, LEWIS &
BOCKIUS LLP
1111 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20004
(202) 739-3000
alexander.reid@morganlewis.com
Counsel for Amici Curiae

QUESTION PRESENTED

Whether California's bulk collection of personal information about the identity of donors to charities, which the Ninth Circuit upheld without applying exacting or strict scrutiny, impermissibly violates their constitutional freedoms of speech, religion, and association under the First and Fourteenth Amendments in light of California's lack of a compelling interest in the bulk collection of donor information and ample tools for ensuring charities comply with state law.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iii
INTEREST OF AMICI CURIAE	1
SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT	3
ARGUMENT	5
I. The Ability to Make Anonymous Donations is an Important Vehicle for Encouraging Broad-based Civic Participation.....	5
A. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Threatens the Right to Make Anonymous Charitable Donations Pursuant to the Dictates of Faith	8
B. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Deters Anonymous Giving for Secular Personal Reasons	10
C. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Puts Donors to Unpopular Social and Political Causes at Risk.....	14
II. The State Has No Compelling Interest in the Bulk Collection of Donor Information, Particularly Given the Serious Risks of Public Disclosure	17
III. California Has Ample Tools for Ensuring Compliance With State Law Without Any Need for the Bulk Collection of Donor Information	24
CONCLUSION.....	26

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page
CASES
Am. for Prosperity Found. v. Harris , 809 F.3d 536 (9th Cir. 2015).....	21
Bates v. City of Little Rock , 361 U.S. 516 (1960)	17
Buckley v. Valeo , 424 U.S. 1 (1976)	6, 7
CBS, Inc. v. Block , 725 P.2d 470 (Cal. 1986).....	22
Emp’t Div., Dep’t of Human Res. of Oregon v. Smith , 494 U.S. 872 (1990)	8
Gibson v. Fla. Legis. Investigation Comm. , 372 U.S. 539 (1963)	7
Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Telemarketing Assocs., Inc. , 538 U.S. 600 (2003).....	7
Marken v. Santa Monica–Malibu Unified Sch. Dist. , 136 Cal. Rptr. 3d 395 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012)	22
McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n , 514 U.S. 334 (1995).....	4, 8
NAACP v. Alabama , 357 U.S. 449 (1958)	4, 14
Watchtower Bible & Tract Soc’y of N.Y., Inc. v. Village of Stratton , 536 U.S. 150 (2002)	7
CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS
U.S. Const. amend. I	passim

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
STATUTES
26 U.S.C. § 507	20
26 U.S.C. § 4941	20
26 U.S.C. § 4943	21
26 U.S.C. § 4946	20
26 U.S.C. § 4958	20
26 U.S.C. § 4967	20
Cal. Gov't Code § 6253.....	21
Cal. Gov't Code § 6254.....	21, 22
Cal. Gov't Code § 12584.....	21
Cal. Gov't Code § 12586.....	21
Cal. Gov't Code § 12588.....	24
Cal. Gov't Code § 12598.....	21
California Public Records Act (CPRA).....	8, 19, 21
RULES AND REGULATIONS
26 C.F.R. pt. 1.....	20
Cal. Code Regs. tit. 11, § 310.....	8, 22
Supreme Court Rule 37.2.....	1
Supreme Court Rule 37.6.....	1

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
OTHER AUTHORITIES
$5K Anonymously Donated to Bridgeport Food Bank , NEWS 12 CONNECTICUT (Feb. 22, 2019), http://connecticut.news12.com/story/40011272/dollar5k-anonymously-donated-to-bridgeport-food-bank	13
2016 U.S. Trust Study of High Net Worth Philanthropy Report , U.S. TRUST & IND. UNIV. LILLY FAMILY SCH. OF PHILANTHROPY (Oct. 2016)	5
Alexander Reid, Renegotiating the Charitable Deduction , 71 TAX ANALYSTS 21 (2013).....	15
Alexis de Tocqueville, 2 Democracy in America (Eduardo Nolla ed., James T. Schleifer trans., Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, 2010) (1840)	6
Anthony Bowen, Forty Years of LGBTQ Philanthropy: 1970–2010 , FUNDERS FOR LGBTQ ISSUES (Jan. 5, 2012), https://lgbtfunders.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/04/40years_lgbtq_philanthropy.pdf	16
ARMOND FIELDS, KATHARINE DEXTER McCORMICK: PIONEER FOR WOMEN’S RIGHTS (2003)	15
Attorney General’s Guide for Charities , CAL. DEP’T OF JUSTICE, CHARITABLE TRUSTS SECTION (Jan. 2019).....	3
California Franchise Tax Board, Summary of Federal Income Tax Changes (2006)	21

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
Claire Cain Miller, Laurene Powell Jobs and Anonymous Giving in Silicon Valley , N.Y. TIMES: BITS (May 24, 2013)	11
DAISETZ TEITARO SUZUKI, ESSAYS IN ZEN BUDDHISM (1961)	10
Eleanor T. Cicerchi & Amy Weskema, Survey on Anonymous Giving , Center on Philanthropy, Indiana University—Purdue University at Indianapolis (1991)	13
ERICA BORNSTEIN, DISQUIETING GIFTS: HUMANITARIANISM IN NEW DELHI (2012)	10
Giving USA 2019: Americans Gave $427.71 Billion to Charity in 2018 Amid Complex Year For Charitable Giving , GIVING USA (June 18, 2019)	3
Guidance Under Section 6033 Regarding the Reporting Requirements of Exempt Organizations, 84 Fed. Reg. 47447 (Sept. 10, 2019)	20
James Allen Smith, Anonymous Giving , in 1 PHILANTHROPY IN AMERICA: A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORICAL ENCYCLOPEDIA (Dwight F. Burlingame ed., 2004)	9
Jennifer Rose Mercieca, The Culture of Honor: How Slaveholders Responded to the Abolitionist Mail Crisis of 1835 , 10 RHETORIC & PUB. AFF. 51 (2007)	14
Joanne Florino, Policing Philanthropy? , PHILANTHROPY MAG. (Summer 2015)	24

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
JOHN CALVIN, INSTITUTES OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION (Ford Lewis Battles trans., Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. 1995) (1536).....	9
Josie Albertson-Grove, Anonymous Donation Funds Scholarship for Brockton Students , THE ENTERPRISE (Feb. 9, 2019), https://www.enterpriseneews.com/news/20190209/anonymous-donation-funds-scholarship-for-brockton-students	12
Julie Salamon, RAMBAM’S LADDER: A MEDITATION ON GENEROSITY AND WHY IT IS NECESSARY TO GIVE (2003)	10
Karl Zinsmeister, Privacy as a Philanthropic Pillar , PHILANTHROPY MAG. (Apr. 2017), https://www.philanthropyroundtable.org/philanthropy-magazine/article/spring-2017-privacy-as-a-philanthropic-pillar	12
Keely Lockhard, George Michael’s Incredible Acts of Kindness Revealed Following His Untimely Death , THE TELEGRAPH (Dec. 26, 2016).....	11
L.S. Tankoos, Constitutional Law—First Amendment , 29 N.Y.L.S. L. REV. 801 (1985)	15
Lisa Rein & Jonnelle Marte, Hackers Stole Personal Information from 104,000 Taxpayers, IRS says , WASH. POST (May 26, 2015), https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/federal-eye/wp/2015/05/26/hackers-stole-personal-information-from-104000-taxpayers-irs-says/?utm_term=.08bde831e6d1	23

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
LUCIUS ANNAEUS SENECA, ON BENEFITS: AD- DRESSED TO AEBUTIUS LIBERALIS (Aubrey Stewart trans., George Bell & Sons 1887)	11
MARTIN LUTHER, COMMENTARY ON THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT (Charles A. Hay trans., 1892).....	9
Matthew 6:2-4	9
Paul Sullivan, Kroc’s Giving, Like McDonald’s Meals, Was Fast and Super-Sized , N.Y. TIMES: WEALTH MATTERS (Jan. 20, 2017), https:// nyti.ms/2k8KXCP	13
Qur’an, Surat Al-Baqarah 2:271; Giving Charity in Secret & Publicly, ZAKAT FOUND. OF AM., https://www.zakat.org/en/giving-charity-secret- publicly (last visited Sept. 19, 2019).....	10
Randy Speith, Anonymous $750,000 Donation Helping Youth Baseball, Softball Players , CBS 4 (Mar. 8, 2019), https://cbs4indy.com/2019/ 03/08/anonymous-750000-donation-helping- youth-baseball-softball-players	13
RUTH CROCKER, MRS. RUSSEL SAGE: WOMEN’S AC- TIVISM AND PHILANTHROPY IN GILDED AGE AND PROGRESSIVE ERA AMERICA (2006).....	15
Sean Parnell, Donor Dad Wants to Stay Anony- mous , ALLIANCE FOR CHARITABLE REFORM (Sept. 25, 2017), http://acreform.org/blog/donor- dad-wants-stay-anonymous	12

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES—Continued

	Page
Sean Parnell, Protecting Donor Privacy, PHILANTHROPY ROUNDTABLE, https://www.philanthropyroundtable.org/docs/default-source/default-document-library/protecting-philanthropic-privacy_white_paper.pdf (last visited Sept. 19, 2019)	12, 16
Sophie Sherry & Christina Zdanowicz, An Anonymous Donor Asked a Hospital Where It Needed Help and Gave $25 Million to Make It Happen , CNN: HEALTH (July 19, 2019), https://www.cnn.com/2019/07/19/health/hospital-donation-25-million-trnd/index.html	13
SUSAN GOODIER & KAREN PASTORELLO, WOMEN WILL VOTE: WINNING SUFFRAGE IN NEW YORK STATE (Cornell University Press 2017).....	16
Travis LaCouter, The Coachella Conservative? , Philanthropy Daily (Jan. 11, 2017), https://www.philanthropydaily.com/the-coachella-conservative	16

INTEREST OF *AMICI CURIAE*¹

The Philanthropy Roundtable is a leading network of charitable donors. Its 600 members include individual philanthropists, family foundations, and private grantmaking institutions. Its mission is to foster excellence in philanthropy, protect philanthropic freedom, assist donors in achieving their philanthropic intent, and help donors advance liberty, opportunity, and personal responsibility in the United States and abroad. The Philanthropy Roundtable seeks to advance the principles and preserve the rights of private giving, including the freedom of individuals and private organizations to determine how and where to direct charitable assets.

The Independent Women’s Forum (“IWF”) is an organization founded by women to foster education and debate about legal, social, and economic policy issues. IWF is committed to increasing opportunity for women, and for all Americans, through policies that expand economic liberty, encourage personal responsibility, and limit the reach of government.

¹ Pursuant to Rule 37.2, counsel of record for Petitioners and Respondent were timely notified of amici’s intent to file this brief. Counsel for Petitioners and Respondent provided amici with written consent. Pursuant to Rule 37.6, counsel for amici affirm that no counsel for a party authored this brief in whole or in part, that no such counsel or party made a monetary contribution intended to fund the preparation or submission of this brief and that no person other than amici and its counsel made such a monetary contribution.

The People United for Privacy Foundation is an independent organization dedicated to providing information and resources to Americans about their right to support the causes they believe in without fear of harassment and intimidation.

As organizations whose members include both donors and recipients of charitable contributions, and as organizations that are themselves supported by charitable donations, amici have a substantial interest in preserving the freedom of donors to support organizations and causes that contribute to a robust civil society, the freedom to do so anonymously, and the freedom of charitable organizations to maintain the privacy of their donors. Amici respectfully urge this Court to protect the First Amendment right of Americans who wish to keep their donations confidential for a variety of good and valid reasons, including religious conviction, fear of retaliation, privacy concerns, avoiding unwanted solicitations, and others.

Amici are concerned that the California Attorney General's demand that protected and confidential personal information—including the names and addresses of donors—be turned over to the State implicates serious constitutional concerns. The State's demand abridges philanthropic freedom, chills charitable giving, weakens the ability of individual donors and non-profit organizations to carry out their goals and missions, and, therefore, abridges their freedoms of speech, religion, and association under the First and Fourteenth Amendments without articulating a compelling State interest. Amici respectfully request this Court to grant the petitions for certiorari and reverse the Ninth Circuit's judgment.

◆

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Privately funded efforts to address social problems, enrich culture, and strengthen society are among the most significant American undertakings, and have been for hundreds of years. The United States is the most generous nation in the world, with charitable gifts by individuals (including bequests) totaling over $427.71 billion in 2018. See Giving USA 2019: Americans Gave $427.71 Billion to Charity in 2018 Amid Complex Year For Charitable Giving, GIVING USA (June 18, 2019).² Nonprofit and charitable organizations across the country benefit from those donations, including religious organizations, schools, hospitals, foundations, food pantries, and homeless shelters. Ibid. These organizations include approximately 115,000 charities registered in California, including amici. Attorney General's Guide for Charities, CAL. DEP'T OF JUSTICE, CHARITABLE TRUSTS SECTION 1 (Jan. 2019).³

America's culture of charitable giving has flourished because its legal framework recognizes the importance of a robust civil society separate from government. Regrettably, however, California’s push to collect, in bulk, and without any compelling reason, the names, addresses, and donation amounts of donors to organizations that operate in California (regardless of where they may be incorporated) transgresses this crucial boundary between government and civil society and infringes on the rights of donors who wish to keep their charitable giving and association with nonprofit organizations anonymous, rather than disclosed to government officials or the public at large. The Supreme Court ruled unanimously in NAACP v. Alabama, 357 U.S. 449, 460 (1958), that “freedom to engage in association for the advancement of beliefs and ideas is an inseparable aspect of the ‘liberty’ assured by the Due Process Clause.” Alabama could not compel the NAACP to reveal the names and addresses of its members because doing so would expose them “to economic reprisal, loss of employment, threat of physical coercion, and other manifestations of public hostility” and thereby restrain “their right to freedom of association.” Id. at 462. This case implicates the same concerns.

² Available at <https://givingusa.org/giving-usa-2019-americans-gave-427-71-billion-to-charity-in-2018-amid-complex-year-for-charitable-giving>.

³ Available at https://oag.ca.gov/sites/all/files/agweb/pdfs/charities/publications/guide_for_charities.pdf.

Many donors simply will not give unless they can keep their donations confidential—whether their anonymity is motivated by religious conviction, fear of retaliation, privacy concerns, avoiding unwanted solicitations, or some other reason. See McIntyre v. Ohio Elections Comm’n, 514 U.S. 334, 341-42 (1995) (holding that the First Amendment protects anonymous speech, including when the “decision in favor of anonymity” is “motivated by fear of economic or official retaliation, by concern about social ostracism, or merely by a desire to preserve as much of one's privacy as possible.”). Forced disclosure of donor names to state governments undermines donors' reliance on anonymity and, in turn, threatens the ability of charitable organizations to rely on those donors. At the same time, California already has ample tools to protect the public from charitable fraud, including targeted use of the California Attorney General's subpoena power.

This Court's review and reversal of the Ninth Circuit's ruling is needed to reject the California Attorney General's bulk-disclosure policy, which serves no important or compelling state interest, could be accomplished by narrower means, and results in a chilling effect on giving that will negatively impact innumerable donors and charitable organizations across the country.

◆

ARGUMENT

I. The Ability to Make Anonymous Donations is an Important Vehicle for Encouraging Broad-based Civic Participation.

Over 80 percent of high net-worth households say that in making a charitable gift, it is important to them that the recipient honor their requests for privacy and anonymity. See 2016 U.S. Trust Study of High Net Worth Philanthropy Report, U.S. TRUST & IND. UNIV.

LILLY FAMILY SCH. OF PHILANTHROPY 40 (Oct. 2016).⁴ The freedom enjoyed by private individuals and associations in giving for public benefit, including giving anonymously, has been a hallmark of American civil society since the Founding. Writing in 1840, Alexis de Tocqueville observed that “[t]here is nothing, in my opinion, that merits our attention more than the intellectual and moral associations of America.”⁵ Today, Americans exercise some of their most cherished constitutionally protected rights through making charitable donations—creating organizations that engage in freedom of speech, freedom of association, and freedom of religion. In this way, charitable giving is, as Tocqueville saw, fundamental not only to our civil society but also to our republican form of government.

The Constitution protects, and American civil society depends on, the right of American donors to associate—whether they do so publicly or anonymously—for any of the reasons explained above and others. Indeed, this Court has “repeatedly found that compelled disclosure, in itself, can seriously infringe on privacy of association and belief guaranteed by the First Amendment.” Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1, 64 (1976). The right to speak and associate anonymously, which is implicit in the First Amendment, extends to the “significant number of persons who support causes anonymously.”

⁴ Available at http://www.ustrust.com/publish/content/application/pdf/GWMOL/USTp_ARMCGDN7_oct_2017.pdf.

⁵ Alexis de Tocqueville, 2 Democracy in America 902 (Eduardo Nolla ed., James T. Schleifer trans., Indianapolis: Liberty Fund, 2010) (1840).

Watchtower Bible & Tract Soc’y of N.Y., Inc. v. Village of Stratton, 536 U.S. 150, 166-67 (2002). That protection includes the right of donors to “pool money through contributions” in order to “join together ‘for the advancement of beliefs and ideas’” through charitable giving. Buckley, 424 U.S. at 65-66 (quoting NAACP, 357 U.S. at 460); see also Illinois ex rel. Madigan v. Tel-marketing Assocs., Inc., 538 U.S. 600, 611 (2003) (“The First Amendment protects the right to engage in charitable solicitation.”); Gibson v. Fla. Legis. Investigation Comm., 372 U.S. 539, 555 (1963) (maintaining privacy is a “strong associational interest”).

The Ninth Circuit’s ruling ignored the fact that by mandating organizations to disclose the names, addresses, and donation amounts of their major donors, California infringes on not only the rights of donors who wish to keep their charitable giving and association with nonprofit organizations anonymous, but also the rights of organizations to maintain their donors’ confidential information, rather than disclosing it to the government. This Court should step in to protect donors’ constitutional freedoms and prevent further unwarranted incursions into private charitable giving that will chill the exercise of First Amendment freedoms and upset long-settled donor expectations of privacy and confidentiality.

A. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Threatens the Right to Make Anonymous Charitable Donations Pursuant to the Dictates of Faith.

Disclosure to government officials and to the public—through California Public Records Act requests, leaks, or otherwise⁶—threatens the freedom to engage in the religious exercise of making anonymous charitable donations pursuant to the dictates of conscience and faith.⁷ See McIntyre, 514 U.S. at 341-42 (acknowledging individuals’ various motivations to exercise First Amendment rights anonymously).

⁶ The post-trial amendment to California regulations which purport to maintain the confidentiality of the donor lists collected by California are not meaningfully different than the California Attorney General’s prior policies regarding confidentiality, which, as the trial court found, resulted in a “pervasive, recurring pattern of uncontained Schedule B disclosures.” Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 52a; see generally Cal. Code Regs. tit. 11, § 310(b). Regardless of assurances by the California Attorney General that, going forward, donor lists will be truly kept confidential from the public at large, there still remains the problem of forced disclosure to government officials and the potential (and perhaps inevitability) of public disclosure, either due to inadvertent errors by government officials or hacking by outsiders.

⁷ To the extent that California mandate infringes donors’ ability to freely associate and exercise their religion, this constitutes the type of case envisioned by this Court that implicates both the freedom of association and the free exercise of religion. See Emp’t Div., Dep’t of Human Res. of Oregon v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872, 882 (1990) (“[I]t is easy to envision a case in which a challenge on freedom of association grounds would likewise be reinforced by Free Exercise Clause concerns.”).

Many donors who desire to remain anonymous are motivated by deeply held religious or moral beliefs that have made anonymous philanthropic giving the norm when it comes to charity over the past two millennia. As recorded in the gospel of Matthew, Jesus Christ admonished his followers that God rewards only those who give “in secret.”⁸ In the fourth and fifth centuries, St. Augustine sought to separate charity from a concern with social relationships and refocus it toward the donor’s relationship with God.⁹ In the thirteenth century, St. Francis preached that charitable giving was undermined when publicly disclosed by a donor because a true charitable virtue “had nothing to do with public recognition.”¹⁰ Martin Luther and John Calvin, who led the Protestant Reformation, similarly discouraged charitable giving that was done to show off before others. Luther taught that “to give alms in secret means where the heart does not expose itself, or seek honor and name from it.”¹¹ According to Calvin, Jesus “intended to teach nothing other than that we be unwilling to seek men’s admiration through our beneficence.”¹²

⁸ Matthew 6:2-4.

⁹ James Allen Smith, Anonymous Giving, in 1 PHILANTHROPY IN AMERICA: A COMPREHENSIVE HISTORICAL ENCYCLOPEDIA 24 (Dwight F. Burlingame ed., 2004).

¹⁰ Id.

¹¹ MARTIN LUTHER, COMMENTARY ON THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT 237 (Charles A. Hay trans., 1892).

¹² JOHN CALVIN, INSTITUTES OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION 344 (Ford Lewis Battles trans., Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co. 1995) (1536).

Other major religions have also historically promoted anonymous charitable giving. Muslim donors may prefer to give sadaqah, an anonymous donation taught as the “best” form of giving.¹³ Jewish donors may follow Maimonides’ teaching that the second and third highest forms of tzedakah (“charity” or “righteousness”) are to give anonymously to unknown or known recipients.¹⁴ Hinduism teaches its adherents to give the gupt dān (meaning an anonymous charitable gift).¹⁵ Buddhism also encourages the practice of confidential giving as the “‘secret virtue’ of Buddhism.”¹⁶ For donors who live by the aforementioned moral or religious convictions, the mere disclosure of their donation may harm their free exercise of religion.

B. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Deters Anonymous Giving for Secular Personal Reasons.

Secular philosophers have also favored anonymous giving for millennia. For example, the first century Roman senator and philosopher Lucius Annaeus Seneca, more commonly known as Seneca the Younger, ¹³ Qur’an, Surat Al-Baqarah 2:271; Giving Charity in Secret & Publicly, ZAKAT FOUND. OF AM., <https://www.zakat.org/en/giving-charity-secret-publicly> (last visited Sept. 19, 2019).

¹⁴ Julie Salamon, RAMBAM’S LADDER: A MEDITATION ON GENEROSITY AND WHY IT IS NECESSARY TO GIVE 127-46 (2003).

¹⁵ ERICA BORNSTEIN, DISQUIETING GIFTS: HUMANITARIANISM IN NEW DELHI 26-27 (2012).

¹⁶ DAISSETZ TEITARO SUZUKI, ESSAYS IN ZEN BUDDHISM 345 (1961).

wrote, “How sweet, how precious is a gift, when he who gives does not permit himself to be thanked,” and who also wrote that “all writers on ethical philosophy tell us that some benefits ought to be given in secret * * * when they do not promote a man or add to his social standing, but help him when in weakness, in want, or in disgrace, they should be given silently, and so as to be known only to those who profit by them.”¹⁷

Accordingly, some donors choose to give anonymously for philosophical or personal concerns that the revelation of their identity might overshadow the efforts of their charity. See, e.g., Claire Cain Miller, Laurene Powell Jobs and Anonymous Giving in Silicon Valley, N.Y. TIMES: BITS (May 24, 2013)¹⁸ (quoting Ms. Powell Jobs, the widow of Apple founder Steve Jobs, as saying “[w]e’re really careful about amplifying the great work of others in every way that we can, and we don’t like attaching our names to things”); Keely Lockhard, George Michael’s Incredible Acts of Kindness Revealed Following His Untimely Death, THE TELEGRAPH (Dec. 26, 2016)¹⁹ (describing the late pop singer George Michael’s wish that his generous support for causes including aid to cancer patients and abused children be kept anonymous so that the attention would be focused on the good work by the charities and not himself).

¹⁷ LUCIUS ANNAEUS SENECA, ON BENEFITS: ADDRESSED TO AEBUTIUS LIBERALIS 25-27 (Aubrey Stewart trans., George Bell & Sons 1887).

¹⁸ Available at <http://bits.blogs.nytimes.com/2013/05/24/laurene-powell-jobs-and-anonymous-giving-in-silicon-valley>.

¹⁹ Available at <https://www.telegraph.co.uk/news/2016/12/26/george-michaels-acts-kindness-revealed>.

Anonymity also allows donors to give to important causes even if they would otherwise decline out of a desire to lead a private life and avoid public displays of wealth. Pittsburgh banker and philanthropist Charles McCune, for example, sought to avoid public recognition for his generous giving throughout his life—and the McCune Foundation carries on this preference by requesting that grantees not disclose gifts from the Foundation.²⁰ Similar privacy concerns pervade today—notable anonymous gifts in 2019 include $100,000 to fund scholarships to high school graduates in Brockton, Massachusetts,²¹ $5,000 to the food bank ministry

²⁰ Sean Parnell, Protecting Donor Privacy, PHILANTHROPY ROUNDTABLE 6-7, https://www.philanthropyroundtable.org/docs/default-source/default-document-library/protecting-philanthropic-privacy-white_paper.pdf (last visited Sept. 19, 2019); see also Karl Zinsmeister, Privacy as a Philanthropic Pillar, PHILANTHROPY MAG. (Apr. 2017), <https://www.philanthropyroundtable.org/philanthropy-magazine/article/spring-2017-privacy-as-a-philanthropic-pillar> (describing New Orleans merchant Judah Touro's decision in the early 1800s to give away the equivalent of $2 billion, mostly anonymously, and his near cancellation of a gift to a war memorial when he was exposed as the donor); Sean Parnell, Donor Dad Wants to Stay Anonymous, ALLIANCE FOR CHARITABLE REFORM (Sept. 25, 2017), <http://acreform.org/blog/donor-dad-wants-stay-anonymous> (explaining that a wealthy father who made a substantial donation to Florida Atlantic University requested anonymity because his daughter attended the university and he wished to shield her from undue attention).

²¹ Josie Albertson-Grove, Anonymous Donation Funds Scholarship for Brockton Students, THE ENTERPRISE (Feb. 9, 2019), <https://www.enterpriseneews.com/news/20190209/anonymous-donation-funds-scholarship-for-brockton-students>.

of New Hope Missionary Baptist Church in Bridgeport, Connecticut,²² $25 million to the Children’s Hospital in Los Angeles,²³ and $750,000 to the Cascade Youth League in Hendricks County, Indiana to build softball and baseball fields for youth.²⁴

Additionally, giving anonymously protects donors from unwanted solicitations by organizations to which they would rather not donate. The desire to minimize solicitations from other organizations was the most frequently cited motivation for giving anonymously according to a university study (followed by “deeply felt religious conviction,” and next by “a sense of privacy, humility, [or] modesty”).²⁵ Major philanthropists have kept donations private to avoid the seemingly endless “deluge” of unwanted donation requests.²⁶

²² $5K Anonymously Donated to Bridgeport Food Bank, NEWS 12 CONNECTICUT (Feb. 22, 2019), <http://connecticut.news12.com/story/40011272/dollar5k-anonymously-donated-to-bridgeport-food-bank>.

²³ Sophie Sherry & Christina Zdanowicz, An Anonymous Donor Asked a Hospital Where It Needed Help and Gave $25 Million to Make It Happen, CNN: HEALTH (July 19, 2019), <https://www.cnn.com/2019/07/19/health/hospital-donation-25-million-trnd/index.html>.

²⁴ Randy Speith, Anonymous $750,000 Donation Helping Youth Baseball, Softball Players, CBS 4 (Mar. 8, 2019), <https://cbs4indy.com/2019/03/08/anonymous-750000-donation-helping-youth-baseball-softball-players>.

²⁵ Eleanor T. Cicerchi & Amy Weskema, Survey on Anonymous Giving, Center on Philanthropy, Indiana University—Purdue University at Indianapolis 9-10 (1991).

²⁶ Paul Sullivan, Kroc’s Giving, Like McDonald’s Meals, Was Fast and Super-Sized, N.Y. TIMES: WEALTH MATTERS (Jan. 20,

C. The State’s Bulk Collection of Charitable Donor Information Puts Donors to Unpopular Social and Political Causes at Risk.

Donors may also prefer to give anonymously for the same important reasons articulated in NAACP v. Alabama—to avoid the threat of public censure, condemnation, and retaliation that can be associated with giving to unpopular causes. The Supreme Court ruled in that case that the Fourteenth Amendment protected the NAACP’s right to keep its membership list confidential. Revealing that information, it warned, was “likely to affect adversely the ability of [the NAACP] and its members to pursue their collective effort to foster beliefs which they admittedly have the right to advocate.” 357 U.S. at 462-63.

Indeed, this threat to donors with unpopular positions has manifested itself throughout American history. President Andrew Jackson, for example, exposed abolitionist sympathizers to public ridicule, pressure, and threats.²⁷ During the civil rights movement, many private actors and government officials fired, threatened, and otherwise intimidated supporters of civil rights. NAACP, 357 U.S. at 462. In the 1970s, government and private actors demonstrated hostility toward 2017), <https://nyti.ms/2k8KXCP> (noting Joan Kroc, wife of McDonald’s CEO Ray Kroc, shuttered her family foundation to limit solicitations).

²⁷ Jennifer Rose Mercieca, The Culture of Honor: How Slaveholders Responded to the Abolitionist Mail Crisis of 1835, 10 RHETORIC & PUB. AFF. 51, 66 (2007).

Socialist Workers Party members through threats, hate mail, destruction of property, and termination from work. See L.S. Tankoos, Constitutional Law—First Amendment, 29 N.Y.L.S. L. REV. 801, 806-07 n.27 (1985). Indeed, it was charitable giving that helped educate Native Americans (in early America) and African-Americans (in the Jim Crow era) when the government would not.²⁸ Similarly, other charity-driven initiatives, such as abolition, women’s suffrage, and civil rights, fundamentally altered the ability of Americans to fully participate in their government—in the face of resistance from the government itself.²⁹

The American suffragist movement greatly benefited from anonymous donations. For example, although philanthropist Olivia Sage publicized her charitable gifts to universities, hospitals, and other organizations, she insisted that her gifts to suffrage organizations be kept anonymous.³⁰ Similarly, philanthropist Katharine Dexter McCormick gave an anonymous $5,000 donation in 1912 to eliminate the deficit of The Woman’s Journal Magazine, which had become a formidable communications tool for the National American Women’s Suffrage Association.³¹ In ²⁸ Alexander Reid, Renegotiating the Charitable Deduction, 71 TAX ANALYSTS 21, 27 (2013).

²⁹ Id.

³⁰ See RUTH CROCKER, MRS. RUSSEL SAGE: WOMEN’S ACTIVISM AND PHILANTHROPY IN GILDED AGE AND PROGRESSIVE ERA AMERICA 215 (2006).

³¹ ARMOND FIELDS, KATHARINE DEXTER MCCORMICK: PIONEER FOR WOMEN’S RIGHTS 107-08 (2003).

1914, an unnamed woman donated $35,000 to the New York suffrage campaign.³²

Nor are risks to donors who support unpopular causes a thing of the past. Anonymous contributions were the leading source of support for LGBTQ causes and groups between 1970 and 2010.³³ No doubt, part of the motivation for anonymity was concern about the potential for violence and harassment against the LGBTQ community. On the other side of this issue, businesses whose owners' families have supported causes that some deem contrary to LGBTQ rights have themselves been targeted for boycotts and disfavor from local government officials.³⁴ Revelation of private donations to right-leaning and left-leaning causes alike have led to harassment and threats of boycotts.³⁵ It is no wonder that donors across the political spectrum, especially supporters of politically

³² SUSAN GOODIER & KAREN PASTORELLO, WOMEN WILL VOTE: WINNING SUFFRAGE IN NEW YORK STATE 173 (Cornell University Press 2017).

³³ Anthony Bowen, Forty Years of LGBTQ Philanthropy: 1970–2010, FUNDERS FOR LGBTQ ISSUES 4, 19 (Jan. 5, 2012), https://lgbtfunders.org/wp-content/uploads/2018/04/40years_lgbtq_philanthropy.pdf.

³⁴ Sean Parnell, Protecting Donor Privacy, supra, at 15; Travis LaCouter, The Coachella Conservative?, Philanthropy Daily (Jan. 11, 2017), <https://www.philanthropydaily.com/the-coachella-conservative> (wealthy donor immediately ceased donations to socially conservative organizations once made public).

³⁵ See, e.g., Parnell, Protecting Donor Privacy, supra, at 14–16 (explaining that donors to Peachtree-Pine homeless shelter in Atlanta, Georgia faced pressure and retaliation unless they donated anonymously).

unpopular causes, prefer to exercise their First Amendment right to give anonymously.

II. The State Has No Compelling Interest in the Bulk Collection of Donor Information, Particularly Given the Serious Risks of Public Disclosure.

The individual freedoms of speech, association, religion, and privacy that the Constitution guarantees constrain government’s unwarranted intrusion into charitable giving—including the bulk collection of donor identities at issue here—without an important, let alone compelling, interest and narrow tailoring. See Bates v. City of Little Rock, 361 U.S. 516, 524 (1960) (“When there is a significant encroachment upon personal liberty, the State may prevail only upon showing a subordinating interest which is compelling.”).

The Ninth Circuit’s decision, absent review and reversal by this Court, will give the State carte blanche to collect all major donor information, without any important or compelling interest in a specific charity’s information. The Ninth Circuit’s ruling completely ignored that the mere disclosure of information to the government may itself cause donors to cease giving to organizations who will be forced to turn over information to the State rather than risk the negative consequences that may result from disclosure. And the Ninth Circuit shrugged off clear examples of “death threats” and “harassment” that Petitioners’ donors demonstrated at trial (Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 31a, 50a)—and which amici donors likely will suffer too, absent this Court’s review and reversal. Unlike the district court, the five judges dissenting from the Ninth Circuit’s denial of en banc review, and other circuits, the Ninth Circuit declined to apply exacting scrutiny and substituted the district court’s factual findings with its own blind faith that California will cease disclosing donor information to the public. Compare Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 34a-39a, with id. at 51a-53a; Pet. Br. in No. 19-251 at 7-10, 15-17.

As explained by Petitioners, there is real constitutional harm caused by unjustified forced disclosure of donor information. Pet. Br. in No. 19-251, at 28-35; Pet. Br. in No. 19-255, at 20. Insofar as the Ninth Circuit’s opinion allows forced disclosure without requiring a compelling or actually important interest, Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 19a (requiring only some improvement in “efficiency”), or narrow tailoring, Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 16a-17a (applying a mere “substantial relation” standard), this Court should grant the petitions and reverse. Donor anonymity is too important a First Amendment right to be sold at so cheap a price—as recognized by the other Circuits that have discussed non-election donor disclosure. See Pet. Br. in No. 19-251, at 24-28.

Moreover, as explained by the five judges dissenting from the Ninth Circuit’s denial of en banc review (Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 93a-96a), the State failed to show a strong interest—much less a compelling one—for the bulk collection of donor names. There is no statute specifically authorizing bulk collection by the State and certainly no legislative finding of a relation between the bulk-disclosure requirement and a compelling state interest. Federal tax laws—which require limited disclosure of donor identities to the IRS and bar subsequent disclosure with very narrow exceptions that do not include bulk disclosures—have no state analogue that could justify the disclosure to which the State lays claim. In the absence of a compelling state interest, no government agency should compel a charity to identify its donors where, as here, the risk of public disclosure—through California Public Records Act requests, leaks, or otherwise—is grave.

Amici recognize the federal government’s legitimate interest in allowing the IRS to identify substantial contributors to certain charities on a confidential basis and to require their disclosure to the IRS. These measures help to prevent donors from claiming fraudulent tax deductions, protect charities against self-dealing, and ensure that charitable grants support genuinely charitable organizations. But even in these limited instances where donor identities are disclosed to the IRS, the disclosure satisfies discrete federal tax law requirements that have no state law analogue. Indeed, the IRS recently eliminated the requirement to disclose names and addresses of donors to certain 501(c) organizations altogether and given its efforts to eliminate such disclosure obligations through regulatory means, it presumably would have also extended the protection to 501(c)(3) organizations but for the statutory impediments presented in doing so.³⁶ The reason given for eliminating the request for donor information is simply that “[t]he IRS does not need the names and addresses of substantial contributors” to carry out the internal revenue laws.³⁷ The IRS recognizes that requiring disclosure as needed on a case-by-case basis avoids increased compliance costs to organizations, preserves IRS resources otherwise dedicated to the statutorily required redaction of certain information, and reduces the risk of inadvertent disclosure of individuals’ private information.³⁸

At the federal level, donor names are required to ensure compliance with discrete, technical provisions of the Internal Revenue Code. For example, some provisions of the Internal Revenue Code prohibit excess benefit transactions by public charities with substantial contributors, 26 U.S.C. § 4958, and bar donor-advised funds from conferring prohibited private benefits on donors, id. § 4967. Section 507 provides for the termination of private foundation status based on the aggregate tax benefits received by statutorily defined “disqualified” persons, which include “substantial contributors.” Id. §§ 507, 4946(a)(1)(A). Section 4941 prohibits self-dealing transactions between substantial contributors and private foundations. See id. § 4941.

³⁶ See Guidance Under Section 6033 Regarding the Reporting Requirements of Exempt Organizations, 84 Fed. Reg. 47447, 47452 (Sept. 10, 2019) (to be codified at 26 C.F.R. pt. 1), <https://www.govinfo.gov/content/pkg/FR-2019-09-10/pdf/2019-19501.pdf>.

³⁷ Id. at 47451.

³⁸ Id.

Lastly, Section 4943 forbids private foundations from holding excess business holdings together with substantial contributors. Id. § 4943.

State governments, however, lack the same interest in collecting donor identities because they do not have analogous tax rules to enforce. Indeed, the California Franchise Tax Board has expressly stated that California does not have analogous rules to the federal government and does not apply federal tax rules that require the bulk disclosure of donor identities. See, e.g., California Franchise Tax Board, Summary of Federal Income Tax Changes 436-37 (2006) (analyzing Pension Protection Act, which modified many of the federal rules applicable to exempt organizations, and determining that the impact of those changes on California revenue is “not applicable”). That the California Attorney General generally has “broad powers” over charitable trusts, Cal. Gov’t Code § 12598(a), maintains a register of charities, id. § 12584, and can make regulations regarding the contents of reports setting forth the nature of a charitable organization’s assets, id. § 12586(a)-(b), does not mean all such regulations are compelling based solely on the Attorney General’s say so. Indeed, none of these laws specifically contemplates or authorizes bulk donor collection.

Moreover, once donor names and information are in the hands of the State, they are more vulnerable to public disclosure through the operation of the California Public Records Act (“CPRA”), Cal. Gov’t Code §§ 6253, 6254. See Am. for Prosperity Found. v. Harris, 809 F.3d 536, 542 (9th Cir. 2015). The CPRA is a highly disclosure-oriented statute. See, e.g., CBS, Inc. v. Block, 725 P.2d 470, 473 (Cal. 1986) (“Maximum disclosure of the conduct of governmental operations was to be promoted by the Act.”). Although the CPRA has various exceptions, they must be narrowly construed—and they are permissive, not mandatory. Marken v. Santa Monica–Malibu Unified Sch. Dist., 136 Cal. Rptr. 3d 395, 405 (Cal. Ct. App. 2012); Cal. Gov’t Code § 6254.

The Ninth Circuit concluded that a new regulation, Cal. Code Regs. tit. 11, § 310(b) (2016), now guarantees the Attorney General will not release information like donor information on IRS Form 990 Schedule B that cannot be released under federal law. Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 34a-36a. But this regulation merely codifies the State’s existing “confidentiality policy”—the very policy in place when the State previously divulged confidential donor information to the public. See id. at App. 51a-53a. If the State’s policy has previously allowed at least “1,778 confidential Schedule Bs * * * [to be] publically posted [online],” id. at App. 52a, and the Attorney General’s office has been plagued by “systematic[] fail[ure] to maintain the confidentiality of Schedule B forms,” id. at App. 51a; Pet. Br. in No. 251, at 14, it was certainly not clearly erroneous for the district court to conclude that the potential for disclosure is still too great. This is especially true given the non-specific, aspirational nature of the new regulation and “protocols” and their unclear relationship with California disclosure statutes. See Cal. Code Regs. tit. 11, § 310(b); Cal. Gov’t Code § 6254. In the absence of a truly significant or compelling state interest—such as compliance with weighty state requirements parallel to those at the federal level—no state government agency should be able to force a charity to identify its donors.

Given that confidentiality in charitable giving is grounded in the constitutional freedom of association and is one of the most important elements of philanthropic freedom, this Court should prohibit the California Attorney General from collecting and disclosing (“inadvertently” or otherwise) donor information in the future. This ever-present risk of disclosure highlights why it is critical that courts ensure that the government has advanced a truly compelling interest before it can collect donor names in bulk. Even the federal government—where safeguards are the strongest—is not immune from allegations of abuse and breaches of personal information from tax returns.³⁹ Especially in the context of California’s historical “inability to keep confidential Schedule Bs” collected in bulk, Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 51a, the Ninth Circuit’s disregard of a need for a compelling interest for this collection should be reviewed and overturned. Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 21a-23a. Because the California Attorney General’s bulk collection fails that exacting scrutiny standard, this Court should review and reverse the Ninth Circuit to prevent government overreach, protect donor privacy, and preclude the chilling of First Amendment rights.

³⁹ See, e.g., Lisa Rein & Jonnelle Marte, Hackers Stole Personal Information from 104,000 Taxpayers, IRS says, WASH. POST (May 26, 2015), https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/federal-eye/wp/2015/05/26/hackers-stole-personal-information-from-104000-taxpayers-irs-says/?utm_term=.08bde831e6d1.

III. California Has Ample Tools for Ensuring Compliance With State Law Without Any Need for the Bulk Collection of Donor Information.

As explained above, California lacks the federal government's interest in collecting donor identities because it does not have analogous laws to enforce. Yet the State does have ample tools to protect the public from fraud and deceptive solicitation practices.

The California Attorney General serves as “parens patriae” (i.e., the protector for those unable to protect themselves) for charitable organizations in the State because charities have no shareholders. The Attorney General also holds subpoena power—available to address any individual instances of donor misbehavior. Cal. Gov't Code § 12588. These authorities are more than ample to assist the State in policing the charities within its borders. The bulk collection of donor names at the state level is simply not needed—especially given the success of federal and state regulators in ensuring compliance with already-existing regulations that have made fraud and self-enrichment rare among charitable organizations. See Joanne Florino, Policing Philanthropy?, PHILANTHROPY MAG. (Summer 2015).⁴⁰

⁴⁰ Available at <https://www.philanthropyroundtable.org/philanthropy-magazine/article/summer-2015-policing-philanthropy->.

At the same time, the practical value of the request for the donor information is de minimis at best. The State does not allege that all, or even a significant number, of the over 100,000 charities in California are engaged in fraud or deceptive solicitation practices. To the contrary, as the district court found, the California Attorney General has only needed to review the Schedule B donor lists that it seeks in less than 1 percent (that is, 5 out of 540) of the investigations it has conducted of charities over the past ten years. Pet. App. in No. 19-251, at 45a; Pet. Br. in No. 19-251, at 13; Pet. Br. in No. 19-255, at 12. There is simply no persuasive reason—let alone a compelling one—for the mass collection of IRS Form 990 Schedule B for fraud and deceptive practices investigations. Even in the small number of cases where a Schedule B might be relevant to a valid investigation, the subpoena power—with procedural requirements that help guard donors’ privacy—could be used rather than seriously burdening the First Amendment rights of hundreds of thousands of other donors.

In sum, the right to choose how and where to make charitable gifts, even unpopular ones, is fundamental to Americans’ exceptional philanthropic freedom. It also implicates fundamental constitutional rights. The State’s rule constitutes unwarranted government intrusion into the exercise of those rights, with potentially dire consequences for charities throughout California and the United States.

CONCLUSION

For the forgoing reasons, amici respectfully request that this Court grant the petitions for writs of certiorari and reverse the judgment of the Ninth Circuit.

Respectfully submitted,

September 25, 2019

ALEXANDER L. REID
Counsel of Record

JAMES D. NELSON
MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS LLP
1111 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20004
(202) 739-3000 alexander.reid@
morganlewis.com

SAMUEL S. SADEGHI
MORGAN, LEWIS & BOCKIUS LLP
600 Anton Boulevard,
Suite 1800
Costa Mesa, CA 92626
(714) 830-0600

Counsel for Amici Curiae